Segundo Jueves Presents

... AND THE EARTH DID NOT DEVOUR HIM

Thursday, January 8, 2015
7 pm – 9 pm
Black Box Studio Theater
Barbara and Art Culver Center for the Arts
3824 Main St, Riverside, California 92501

Please join us for a staged reading of a new play adaptation by Tiffany Ana López of Tomás Rivera’s classic novel And the Earth Did Not Devour Him about the journey of a young child migrant farmworker and all he witnesses as he travels from home to the fields and back again.

Tomás Rivera (1935-1984) served as Chancellor at the University of California, Riverside, from 1979-1984. Among the first of his generation to achieve the doctorate and pursue a career in higher education, he coined the term “civic morality” to describe the responsibility of educators to serve community.

Tiffany Ana López is Professor of Theatre, Film and Digital Production at UCR & holder of the Tomás Rivera Endowed Chair in the College of Humanities, Arts & Social Sciences. She is also founding director of the Segundo Jueves (Second Thursday) Play Project at the Culver. Her adaptation, And the Earth Did Not Devour Him, received a staged reading at the University of Texas, Austin in 2013.

This event is free & open to the public. Seating is limited.
